Summertime “Back to Basics” Series:

Who provides which governmental service to Barefoot Bay residents?

Recreation services (i.e. amenities in common areas including Food & Beverage, meeting rooms, etc.), the enforcement of the DOR, (BBRD internal) non-piped stormwater drainage, and maintenance of all common areas and buildings are provided by BBRD. Everything else is provided by Brevard County. What typically leads to confusion among new residents is the fact the BBRD is located in “unincorporated” Brevard County and is not a municipality. Although our cozy little “community” looks like a small town, it is really just another part of Brevard County. BBRD, as a special district, does not have the jurisdiction or authority that municipalities have in Florida. Staff and the community manager coordinate our efforts with specific Brevard County departments whenever a synergy of efforts can improve service delivery, but ultimately if you have a complaint about County services you really should call your County Commissioner or Brevard County government.

Likewise, BBRD enforces a “private” (i.e. not related to government) DOR as opposed to the Brevard County Code of Ordinances. Asking staff to start a DOR case against a neighbor for a County Code violation, while easier than dealing with the County, is not a wise use of BBRD resources and staff’s time. Lastly, a DOR is typically more strict than government codes (a DOR less strict than governmental land-use codes is really meaningless as the stricter government codes would ultimately be enforced). Some people have a bizarre notion that municipal or county ordinances take priority over a DOR. This is simply not true. If municipal or county ordinances “took priority” over DOR rules, there would be virtually no purpose for DOR communities. Typically the stricter ordinance/regulation is enforced.
